in the cellar : The grapes, carefully selected from the dry-land areas were picked at 21,5Â°B to ensure high fruit acids and flavours. The grapes came from mostly old bush vines in the area of Paardeberg and Drakenstein. The yield was 10-12 tons per hectare.

Only the highest quality grapes from the area are destalked, crushed and pre-cooled. The juice is then settled and only the free-run portion is fermented. After approximately two weeks of cold fermentation 10-12Â°C, the wine was kept on its lees for another six weeks. Selected wines from the area are then blended to combine the different characters before it is finally bottled.
