about the harvest: The Chenin Blanc, Semillon and Sauvignon Blanc grapes were harvested individually each at their optimum ripeness levels.

in the cellar : No skin contact was given to the Chenin Blanc or Semillon. The Sauvignon Blanc was left on the skins for a limited time, to extract some more flavour. The juice were settled over two days and fermented with a selected yeast strain known for producing lots of tropical fruit flavours. After fermentation the wine was blended stabilised and bottled.
