The Pinot Noir cultivar has small berries and thin skins from which a ruby-red wine evolves without a dense colour or rough tannins. In fact, Pinot Noir can be described as a "red white wine", so our approach to Pinot Noir has always been to preserve the elegance unique to this noble cultivar.

With this Unwooded Pinot Noir 2011 we are taking the commitment to our favourite red cultivar one step further, creating even more elegance for this accessible wine. We are convinced that this it will introduce many a non-red-wine drinker to the pleasure of enjoying Pinot Noir.
