Grapes have been grown on Neethlingshof for more than 300 years or within 50 years of the Dutch East-India Company establishing a victualling station at the Cape to supply its passing ships. The farm was initially called De Wolvendans (The Dance of Wolves). Soon after full ownership of the farm was acquired by Johannes Henoch Neethling towards the end of the 1820s, the name was changed to Neethlingshof. A member of the Biodiversity & Wine Initiative, acknowledged for its protection of indigenous habitat, the 273 ha estate has set aside 116 ha for conservation. It cultivates both red and white varietals, with the bias marginally in favour of whites. The main white varieties are Sauvignon blanc, Chardonnay and Gewürztraminer. The predominant soil types found on the farm are Oakleaf and Tukululu.

in the cellar : The grapes are cooled by the evening mist and sea breeze giving the vines time to rest at night and for the grapes to develop to phenolic ripeness and retain their natural acidity. An average pf 8 tons per ha were hand-harvested in February. The block is harvested in segments and to the winemaker's taste. To ensure that the quality is kept the grapes are harvested early in the morning and placed into small crates to minimize the chance of the grapes breaking during transport. The grapes were fermented in stainless steel tanks and aged on its lease up until bottling, keeping the wine fresh and giving it a lively mouthfeel.
