in the vineyard :

Area Of Production: On the slopes of the Simonsberg Mountain between the wine-growing areas of Franschhoek, Stellenbosch and Paarl, Western Cape, South Africa.

Soil Composition: Combination of Klapmuts/Longlands type soils of Malmesbury shale origin as well as Oakleaf and Hutton type soils of Cape granite origin.

about the harvest: Cultivars are harvested separately and made separately.

in the cellar : Fermentation takes place on the skins for about seven days, after which it gets an extended maceration period of about one week. The wine is then pressed into 30% new and 70% second- and third-fill 300 litre French oak barrels. After malolactic fermentation the wine is racked and then returned to the barrels for a total of 12 months.
