Farming regeneratively is a nurturing journey where we focus on creating a healthy environment in which our vines can naturally develop their full potential. The interdependent relationship between nature's abundance and the sun's generosity produces grapes that display their provenance authentically.

Grenache noir bush vines grow in decomposed granite soils rich in organic matter - a perfect canvas to produce lively, bright fruit, enticing aromas, fresh tannins and a lively finish in the vineyard : The Grenache noir vineyard is called Gesamelike Wei (communal pasture) because it was originally used for grazing by nomadic trek farmers. The current vineyard was planted in 2016.

Soil: Decomposed granite
